ANTICIPATE, GET READY, AND OVERCOME

Mongolia Anticipation of Steppe Fire 2025

PROJECT OVERVIEW

In Mongolia, steppe fires are escalating yearly, destroying herders' pastures and livestock, and causing significant livelihood losses. Drought and global warming are intensifying fire frequency. According to the 2023 Wildfire Incident Report by Mongolia's National Emergency Management Agency, over 130 fires burned 2.4 million hectares, impacting 230,000 people, primarily herders, leading to displacement and economic crises. The limited resources of sparsely settled households in soums to promptly extinguish fires or respond swiftly are a key factor in fire spread. The "Mongolia Anticipation of Steppe Fire" project aims to prevent fires, boost community engagement, strengthen local capacity, and protect herders' sustainable livelihoods.
